To: you@kochi.jp Subject: Fireworks

Dear Kumi,

I got up very early this morning to check today's weather because there are fireworks tonight. But the weather report said, "It will be rainy today". So I was very sad then.

Around 6 o'clock, the rain stopped. I'm sitting here and watching the fireworks. They are so beautiful. I'll send you some pictures later.

(4) 次の英文は、Yoko のある日の日記です。日記の内容について、A・Bの問いに答えなさい。

Monday September 11

When I was walking to school this morning, I found a wallet on the ground. A young woman was riding her bike. I said to myself, "Maybe it is her wallet. She needs it. I'll give it to her."

The station was five hundred meters away. "She will get off the bike at the parking area for bikes near the station," I thought. So I started to run and said again and again, "Excuse me. You dropped your wallet!" But she didn't hear me. Many people looked at me when I was running after her. I started to feel tired and wanted to give up, but I said to myself at the same time, "If she receives her wallet, she will be happy." So I kept running to the station.

She went into the parking area and I went after her. At first, I couldn't find her because there were so many people. When I began to think, "I'll give up," I found the woman in the parking area.

I went to her and said, "Excuse me. Is this your wallet?" She said, "Oh, yes. It's mine," and took her wallet. Then she walked into the station. Soon the train came and she got on it. She didn't say "Thank you" to me. (¬) So I felt sad. I went out of the parking area and walked to school.

At the school, I talked to my friend Kyoko about the thing I did this morning. She said, "Did you run because you wanted to hear "Thank you" from that woman?" I thought about it and said, "No, I didn't. I thought she needed the wallet. I just wanted to give it back to her." "(4) That's important," said Kyoko. The woman looked happy when I gave the wallet to her. That was the most important thing. Now I feel better. Thank you, Kyoko.
